The Facts Regarding Phosphorous and Lawns

Tracy Tudor ■ Purdue University

Much has been said and written about the inclusion of this product in lawn care applications. What is it? Why do plants need it? Why is it an environmental problem? What are the potential phosphorous sources? What is available to us in lawn fertilizer product selection? What are best management practices in selecting a fertilizer program? What information can you share with your customers?

Diagnosing Plant Diseases in the Landscape – Getting it Right

Dr. Tom Creswell ■ Purdue University

As Director of the Purdue Plant & Pest Diagnostic Lab, Tom Creswell brings us a wealth of knowledge and experience in proper diagnostics. How do you collect good samples? The State of the Industry appears better than it was this time last year. Across the state, we are hearing that business is a bit better, or at least has stabilized. While new housing starts are still struggling; it appears that property owners are indeed taking care of their lawns and landscapes. Regulatory issues will continue to play a role in our world and the opportunity for growth is restricted by more stringent banking requirements. If you have a question that you would like our panel to address, then simply send it to me at rea@thegreenskeeper.com and we'll try to get it in the mix.

Straight Talk on Equipment Calibration

Glenn Hardibeck ■ Purdue University

Each manufacturer, each distributor, each professional and each university person seems to have a slightly different way to calibrate equipment. With so much varying information available, it's no wonder that many are left questioning: What's right? What's wrong? Let's get down to straight talk on proper calibration.

Turf Disease – Review of 2011 and Anticipating 2012

Dr. Richard Latin ■ Purdue University

This presentation will focus on a few turf diseases, such as Summer Patch, Red Thread and Leaf Rust that were prominent in 2011. We will review the nature of these diseases and will discuss why they were especially troublesome during the past growing season. For each disease, cultural and chemical control options will be addressed as we try to prevent serious damage in 2012.

Landscape Disasters of 2011 – Part 2

Dr. Jim Chatfield ■ OSU Extension

Dr. Joe Boggs ■ OSU Extension

You don't know where you are going unless you know where you've been. Taking a look back at the landscape disasters of 2011 will certainly be a good preparation for 2012. This session will focus on identifying pest problems experienced during the past year, with an eye towards assessing plant health impacts – while developing management strategies for the future.
