"The 2014 Growing Season" What is there to say?

Dr. Cale A. Bigelow ■ Purdue University

In our region, we went from the much publicized Polar Vortex to the Non Summer. What can and did we learn? Certainly, some of our tried and true dogmas held true. Weaker species were weaker. Mowing went on forever. Spring seedings were difficult at best. Weeds were everywhere and all the time. We will touch on many of these 2014 Growing Season topics and more to keep your turf healthy in 2015.

10:00 am to 11:00 am

Water Availability in Indiana

Dr. Laura Bowling ■ Purdue University

Dr. Bowling's presentation discusses the status and variability of surface and groundwater resources throughout Indiana as well as the role of water supply reservoirs. We also will address recent trends in water withdrawals across the state and the future of water availability. Regulatory, social, and environmental considerations when developing new or expanding access to existing water sources will also be included in this discussion.

Once more, our evolving panel of experts returns to Oak Hill to share their insight on the year ahead. After one of the harshest winters in Indiana history, most parts of the state experienced spring-like growing conditions that simply did not stop until late September. Clearly, business is better in most parts of the state. Construction is up and consumer confidence seems improved. Yet there are concerns about unease over the economy. How will this confidence and concern shape 2015 and "The State of the Industry?"

2014's Top Turfgrass Insects

Dr. Douglas Richmond ■ Purdue University

This presentation will examine the most interesting and problematic insects occurring in lawns and landscapes during 2014. We will review their impact in relationship to prevailing growing conditions throughout the year and look at the most practical and cost effective management options for each of these pest insects.

Landscape Weed Management: It's Getting Better All The Time!

Dr. Hannah Mathers ■ The Ohio State University

Some of the worse weeds in landscape settings will be covered including Yellow Nutsedge and Canada Thistle. However, our emphasis will be placed, up-front, on proper herbicide usage to enhance your landscape weed control program. New products and especially landscape mulch combined with herbicides will be a part of our discussion.

Trees & Turf: Can We All Get Along?

Dr. Bert Cregg ■ Michigan State University

Trees and turf are often viewed as mixing as well as oil and water. With careful planning, however, it doesn't have to be an either/or situation. Identifying the requirements of each is critical to effective landscape management. Understand how trees impact turf and vice versa. Identify which turfgrasses are likely to be impacted by trees. Learn how to manage trees and turf to optimize performance of both.
