Proper Soil Testing, Reading a Soil Test, and What Nutrients are in Products

Jeremy Warner 9:00 am

Today we will discuss proper soil testing for specific target areas. We will look into what you should expect from such tests and how to determine the information you receive from each site test. Next, we will look at what nutrients are actually in the products we are using. Are they indeed the best combination for this situation and are they best long-term for the health of the plants involved? Lastly, are they the best for the soil itself?

Tips and Tricks for Difficult to Control Weeds in Turf and Landscape Beds

Jason Fausey 2:15 pm
NuFarm Americas

Preventing weeds from becoming a distraction in a beautiful landscape or managed turfgrass areas are some of the most important and time-consuming challenges faced by our industry. From the development of a strong pre-emergent herbicide program to selecting proper postemergent products we often deal with plant diversity in landscapes beds and the need for flexibility in controlling various types of weeds. The challenges faced in turfgrass are often different, but selection no less critical. Today, we will discuss common options as they relate to new and existing varieties in landscape beds and turfgrass.
